

Soledad Inmate Raps Mind On Conditions, Food, Drugs

"I don't believe that marijuana is addicting or that it could influence people to commit crime."

This opinion and others were shared with Hartnell students last Monday by Mr. Nick Padilla, an inmate at North Facility of Soledad Prison.

Like It Is

Mr. Padilla, who was convicted for involuntary manslaughter, gave the audience a very interesting and entertaining two hours in a program billed as "A Soledad prisoner tells it like it is."

For the most part, one got the idea that Mr. Padilla did just that. He fielded questions covering everything from the food ("it's pretty lousy") to what prison life is really like ("it is pretty much what you make of it.")

"You will find people in prison with very negative outlooks, but you'll see these same kinds of people on the outside." Mr. Padilla thought one of the best ways people on the outside could help prisoners to take more of an interest would be willing to come out and visit.

Working with the Establishment

For the benefit of those who may plan a long stay at the facility in the future, he recommended participation in the Inmate Congress or Men's Advisory Council. Other activities include Black study groups and Chicano study groups.

In North Facility one can see reflected the racial inequality in the judicial system that is spoken of by many minority groups. Over 50% of the inmates are minority people. There are approximately 500 whites, 400 blacks, 168 Chicano and about 10 others from oriental and other racial groups at North Facility.

Prison Life

Average days at the prison for most inmates include a lot of time in the "yard" where the men lift weights, throw horseshoes, play shuffleboard, etc. One has plenty of opportunity to read or take courses in many fields. In addition, inmates are given jobs to earn money, keep busy or learn trades.

Wants to Attend College

Mr. Padilla hopes to get out in six or seven months. He thinks he would enjoy going to Hartnell or some other school when he gets out.

We wish to extend to Mr. Padilla an enthusiastic welcome if he chooses Hartnell and to give many thanks to both Mr. Padilla and Floyd Satterlee, the Hartnell student and prison employee who was responsible for the program. It was a most enjoyable experience.

INMATE Nick Padilla talked about prison life and daily routine. Hartnell student Floyd Satterlee, right, arranged program.

Students Take Over

Help is on the way. Hartnell College has its own security force. The Campus Security is now controlled by the students in the Police Science department.

In the past some members of the college advocated that the security force be employed from the outside. But on September 27 the students took over. The main goal of the Campus Security will be to provide much-needed help to the students when their cars stall or present other problems.

The force will also enforce the parking regulations. A reminder to those who violate the parking rules — the citations will go to the Municipal Court. You will be held responsible if you do not pay the fine.

The organization will be manned by eight security officers and two young ladies. "All of the officers have been deputized, but this is not their function here at the college," states Director Cameron Ervin. "Our job here is to provide a service to the students and faculty. We will help those who have trouble with their tutomobiles and assist those who have other problems."

The future looks good for these officers. They are getting on-the-job training while completing their college requirements.

The Campus Security Force will have radios, and a patrol car in the near future. The program will be available 24 hours per day, seven days a week. The headquarters is located in Room T-6. Office hours will be 7:00 A.M. to 10 P.M.

Registration for State College

TAKE THESE STEPS TO UPPER LEVEL

Planning to continue on at a state college after you have whittled Hartnell down to size?

Looking for new fields after you have studied everything in the Hartnell catalog?

The time to start working to get into any state college is NOW. And it isn't easy.

Follow this procedure to apply for Fall, 1972. Don't be left behind.

First Step

—On October 15 and thereafter, pick up an application from your counselor or a State College admission office.

—File the application with the college of your choice during the month of November, but NOT before the 1st.

Each college will establish enrollment quotas. The college will send a space reservation notice to applicants it is able to accommodate within the enrollment quotas.

If you cannot be accepted at your first choice, your application will be considered for your next choice.

Hardship Case?

Each college may consider hardship cases. If the State College admissions office cannot accommodate you at any of the campuses of your choice, you'll have the chance to request your application to be considered by another college whose quotas are not filled.

—If you receive a space reservation, you should start action to send your transcripts and test scores to the college where you have secured the reservation.

—If your records and scores are acceptable, you're in.

Bottom of the Barrel

State colleges not filled during the initial filing period will remain open until quotas are filled.

—Applicants will be taken on a first-come, first-served basis after the initial filing period beginning December 1st.

All clear? We said it isn't easy.

Playful Otter Fights To Survive

He lies on his back floating free in kelp, stuffing himself on abalone. He's the California sea otter, a rare little creature trying to make a comeback from near extinction.

The sea otter was the subject of a Jacques Cousteau TV special last Sunday evening. The nationally broadcast program featured an interview with William Bryan, local attorney and Hartnell Board of Trustee member.

Local Expert

Mr. Bryan is considered one of the foremost experts on the California sea otter. When Cousteau came to Monterey to study the otter, he contacted Bryan to find out the best way to photograph the elusive little fellow.

Bryan is on the advisory board of the Friends of the Sea Otter, a group dedicated to protection of the sea otter.

Early Interest

During an interview with the Sentinel, Bryan drew a short sketch of how he became interested in the sea otter, and the problems related to it.

After taking up diving in 1945, Bryan became fascinated with the otter because they had so many human characteristics.

The otter uses tools to break shells for food. To see one lying on its back in kelp may remind one of a Dagwood Bumstead* spending a lazy Sunday afternoon in his hammock.

An Unusual Comeback

The otter was thought to be extinct from 1911 to 1938 when Edith Fisher, a marine biologist from San Francisco State College revealed that a few had survived and were living on Bixby Creek.

People began throwing firecrackers and shooting at the otters, causing them to move on up the coast. They reached Point Lobos State Park in the 1950's. There are now thought to be over 1,000 otters in an area ranging from Monterey Bay to Moro Bay.

Cause of the Problem

Man's greed and violent nature drove the otter to near extinction before 1911 because of its fine pelt. Today it's the abalone fishermen, trying to make a quick buck on the relatively rare abalone that may cause both the abalone and the otter to become extinct in the next few years.

The otter feeds on abalone. With abalone selling at nearly six dollars a pound, the fishermen feel that the otter is taking away from their livelihood. They have been killing the otter in spite of a possible six months jail sentence and/or a $1,000 fine. It's sometimes difficult to catch the offenders and when they are caught the local authorities in the small coastal towns tend to look the other way because commercial fishing is important to economy.

A Solution?

The abalone are being over-harvested because of the high prices. The handwriting may be on the wall for both the abalone and the otter if some method of farming abalone is not put into action soon.

LAUGHTER

I live within you
Providing the energy
That makes you live

Yes, I am the flame
That warms your smile
Melts the ice in your heart

You may not recognize me
Yet
You know me

We have met
Not too long ago
In the corners of yesterday

The turbulent waters of anger
Endeavor to extinguish me
Yet, I survive

The Shadow Knows

PEACE IS NO PROBLEM

By L. C. Shadow

Dick Nixon was in trouble. Here it was, smack in the middle of an election year, with millions of kids voting, and he had that darned war hanging over his head. That darned Vietnam War. It had bothered him ever since he was elected, and it now threatened to end his career. He had to do something. So for help, he went into conference . . .

"Well, Henry, John, we have a problem. To make it perfectly clear, we have to do something about this war."

"Mr. President, give me John Wayne and 10 Texans and I'll have that war over in 10 minutes."

"Uh, John, I don't think that would set too well with our northern conservatives. They don't like to be left out. Henry?"

"Mr. President, I've been thinking about this a while. I figure all we have to do is tell the people the war is over and they'll believe us. I mean, if you can't believe your President, who can you believe?"

So they did.

For most of America, the Vietnam War had ended. President Nixon had announced over every major network that with the withdrawal of over half the American troops, the Vietnam War was, for all intents and purposes, over. Martha Mitchell said so on the Merv Griffin show. Even columnists like Alsop and Anderson picked up the ball and ran it, until every Joe Roastbeef Middleclass in the nation was convinced the war was a thing of the past.

Of course, there were a few diehards (mostly students) who insisted that the war was going on. Presidential hopeful Pete McCloskey issued a statement that 13 or 1300 casualties, a war was a war and it had to end.

But realizing that there will always be diehard insurgents, Americans ignored the "peace-niks" and re-elected Nixon in a landslide victory over Hubert Humphrey.

In his inaugural address, President Nixon thrilled and pleased his audience by announcing the end of American racism, poverty, crime . . .

TUTORING OFFERED

Need help? FREE tutorial service will again be available to those students who "need" it. The Tutorial Service will be staged by students who have been selected by the Tutorial Advisor, Joseph Martinez.

According to Mr. Martinez, "It behooves all students who are having problems with their studies to try the tutorial service."

The service will operate in the Faculty Office Building, Rooms 21 and 22.

Students should also check the bulletin boards to see if any change has been made in the program.

Students should also consult Mr. Martinez if they have a problem or a subject that they want to be tutored in and find the subject not being offered.

Local Food Coop Started

A Food Cooperative is getting on its feet here in Salinas, much progress has already been made in regards to organizing the Cooperative. The purpose of it is to make available to more and more people better foods at lower (bulk) prices.

An organizational meet will happen Monday night, October 4, 7:30 at the Peace Center on the corner of Main and Gabilan here in Salinas. Of course, this will be open to all concerned — don't hesitate to come and give/get your share. For more info at any time call 758-1228.

"WOULD YOUR LIFE MAKE A GOOD PORNOGRAPHIC MOVIE?"

Jim Phipps:
"It all depends on your taste. I would pay to go see a movie of my life, but I wouldn't take a girl. Unless she was one of the girls in the movie."

Larry Sloan:
"Horny or porno? It would make both."

Paula Benoit:
"I'm not sure. I think it would be more like a Walt Disney picture."

Ron Stuart:
"Yeh. No one leads a more grotesque life than I do. Absolutely filthy."

Marsh Foner:
"It depends on what aspects you take. If I could censor some phases, it would be more like a musical."

DO IT DEFENSE!!

HARTNELL ROLLS ON 27-0

By David McCaine

Defense again was the name of the game as the Hartnell College football team utilized its tenacious defense to perfection and resulted in the Panthers recording a 27-0 whitewash of the Fresno Rams.

Minus yardage is all the Rams could show in rushing at the end of the contest as defenders such as Ron Tate, Steve Jaurique, Steve Whitted, Pete Mazucca, Bob Haag and Chris Elliott made life on the ground a complete nightmare for Fresno. Last week Modesto also ended the game in the minus yardage range as the Pirates suffered a 40-7 loss.

Neither team could come close for a threat most of the first quarter until Hartnell took possession of the ball on their own 27 yard marker. From there the Panther scoring machine started clicking off the yardage.

Crunching Ground Attack

Quarterback Mike Teresa piloted Hartnell's crunching ground attack on a 10-play 73-yard touchdown march. Topping off the drive was quick-moving Alton Gerard who sliced into paydirt from four yards out to register Hartnell's initial score. Neal "Tex" Munn kicked the PAT to set the Panthers at 7-0.

Fresno, in the meantime was going no where plenty fast as the Ram offensive efforts repeatedly snowed under by the Hartnell defense.

The Panther offense got the ball and mounted another long drive but the offense was stymied when Teresa's attempted pass was intercepted in the end zone by a Ram defender.

Following the interception, the Fresno offense finally came to life, as it was able to produce some momentum. It looked as if the Rams would score after they moved the ball deep into Panther territory via the passing game.

The Mean Machine

Fresno was unable to score though, as the Ram QB, Bob Prieto, became victim of part of the Hartnell defensive "Mean Machine." Ron Tate and Steve Whitted clobbered Prieto when he attempted a pass and that was all for both Prieto and Fresno the rest of the first half as Whitted recovered the loose pigskin.

The start of the second half was almost a prototype of the first as neither team could mount much of a drive until Hartnell was able to sustain a scoring drive late in the third quarter. Sophomore back Alton Gerard again capped the offensive drive by hotfooting it to the end zone from 17 yards out. Munn split the up-rights with the PAT kick to up the Panther lead to 14-0.

Beautiful Fake

A long Panther march early in the fourth period was highlighted when a number of Fresno defenders brought Gerard down. Unfortunately for Fresno, Gerard didn't have the football. In the meantime, QB Mike Teresa was running down the sidelines on a 49-yard run that went to the Fresno 21. Later Teresa scored Hart's 3rd

TD on a five-yard run. Munn missed the PAT kick to leave it 20-0, Hartnell.

A short drive from the Ram 17-yard marker after a fumble recovery by Ron Tate this drive set up the final game score. A four-yard dash by Ken Dean put the score at the final 27-0 goose egg after Munn's PAT kick.

Leading Rushers

Top ground gainer for the Panthers was Gerard, who rushed for 186 yards in 29 carries. Teresa was second, totaling 99 yards while Ron Choate, Andy Roberts and Russ Ostarello rushed for 23, 22 and 15 yards respectively.

■ PRACTICING PASS protection plays are No. 71, Dave Doris; No. 69, Hague; No. 68, Rodriguez; No. 72, Gardner; No. 65, Don Burelli; No. 52, Mancuso; No. 62, Jufiar; No. 63, Cron; No. 72, Cooper — with Frassetto and Blackwell in jerseys having unreadable numbers.

Can-Am Set Oct. 15-16-17

By Ruben Salgado

The preparations are almost completed for the Monterey-Castrol Grand Prix at Laguna Seca. The dates have been set for October 15, 16, 17.

Quite a few of the world's best race drivers will be on hand to produce thrills and excitement for all racing "aficionados." Heading the list is Jo "Seppi" Siffert, the number three in the world on overall point standings.

The Andy Granatelli colors will make their initial West Coast appearance at Laguna Seca Raceway. Jo Siffert will be at the wheel of a 12-cylinder German creation. The machine is a brand new Porsche. The machine has finished third at the Watkins Glen Can-Am July 25. This was the first outing for this new car.

Start your preparations now if you want to attend this great event. The stands get crowded. If you wait too long, you may not get good seats.

Saturday Night Forecast: Rain (Football, That Is)

Coach Tony Teresa's grid squad will hit the road again this weekend as the Hartnell College Panthers tangle with the Tigers of Reedley College. Kickoff time is 7:30 at the Reedley field.

Football should fill the evening sky as Reedley is known for the passing game. The passing attack is the mainstay of the Tiger offense. Against opponents this year, Reedley has thrown about 40 passes per game.

The rushing game is Hartnell's bag. They have rushed for more than 300 yards per game so far this year. The defensive unit has held its opponents to minus yardage in their two games.

Contrasting styles will make this game a good one. The main point of attack will have to be Hartnell's third place rating in the state while Reedley is number six. Reedley will be out to become number three, at least for now.
